The men had breakfast at nine o'clock and we went out into the fields at 9:30. This is a wonderful shooting country with a good variety of game. On each drive both partridges and pheasants came over. We killed about 200 pheasants, 100 partridges, and a number of hares. The weather, as has been the case all this week, was crystal clear just like an Indian summer day at home — here they call it St. Martin's summer. The beaters were very genial and our shooting companions extremely hospital and sportsmanlike.

At two o'clock we came back to the stable on the Prouvost farm for lunch and had other drives afterwards.

E. and I left about 6:15 to motor to Paris, which we reached at 9:30. It had been a wonderful day.
